Antari Business Partner Privacy Notice

19 November 2026 / BP-PRIVACY-2026-11-19-v1 / English

1 Who handles your information

Antari Corporation, 5990 NW 102nd Ave, Doral, FL 33178, USA, is the controller of the personal information described here and operates the Antari Business Partner program. This notice covers enrollment, sponsorship, Pod Stack orders, allocation and earnings administration. The Account Privacy Notice at https://account.antari.ai/legal/privacy.html also explains sign-in and account management. Contact https://support.antari.ai/ for privacy requests and concerns.

2 Records and purposes

When you enroll, Antari processes your account and member identifiers, email, name, country, invitation, sponsor relationship and consent records. It obtains information from you, the member or invitation service, and transactions you initiate. It uses these records to authenticate you, check eligibility, prevent duplicate attribution and record which terms you accepted.

When you order or allocate capacity, Antari records order references, quantities, payment status, capacity, allocation and relevant subscription activity. It uses these records to fulfill and reconcile orders, administer the Grid, calculate eligible earnings, show statements, correct errors and answer disputes. Depending on payout requirements, a payment service may also need identity or tax information. Provide it only through the designated secure process.

Account access, security events, support requests and audit records help Antari detect misuse and resolve failures. Providing information needed to verify membership, fulfill a purchase or make a lawful payment is necessary for that activity. Enrollment does not by itself subscribe you to promotional communications.

3 Who can see program information

A sponsor may see relevant referral, enrollment and qualifying activity in their own workspace. The program uses allocation and related subscription status to determine credit. Sponsorship alone gives no access to private Sentia conversations, health information or verification codes. Authorized personnel and providers handling identity verification, payments, records and support receive information needed for their roles. Antari may disclose records when lawfully required or to resolve a transaction dispute.

4 Legal grounds and transfers

Where applicable, Antari processes information to take steps you request before enrollment and perform the agreement, meet legal obligations, and pursue legitimate interests in account security, accurate attribution and fraud prevention. Where consent is required, Antari will request it for the specific purpose. You may withdraw that consent prospectively. Acknowledging this notice records that it was presented and does not authorize unrelated uses.

When information crosses borders, Antari applies the transfer safeguards required by applicable law. You may contact Antari for information about destinations and safeguards applicable to your data. Program members using their own contact lists remain responsible for their lawful collection and use.

5 Retention and account closure

Antari keeps enrollment and order records for the time necessary to administer the relationship and reconcile payments. It retains tax, consent, security and dispute records as needed for the relevant legal obligations and claims. Retention depends on the type of record and the applicable market. Clearing browser storage or signing out does not delete those records. Account closure may require resolving active subscriptions or outstanding orders. A deletion request can still be made through support.

6 Requests and choices

Depending on applicable law, you may request access, correction, deletion, restriction or portability, object to certain processing or withdraw consent. Contact Antari Support using your registered account and describe the request. Antari may verify your identity before acting and will explain any lawful retention requirement. You may complain to the competent privacy regulator.

If you believe a referral, allocation or earnings record is inaccurate, identify the relevant transaction or cycle and request review of the records and outcome. Do not include a password, one-time code, full payment-card number or private customer information in a general support message. Antari will give notice of material changes to this privacy notice and identify the applicable version.